

Bio for Glen Curole

Glen Curole is a Sr. Business Continuity Consultant for the Louisiana Small Business Development Center and is a Certified Business Continuity Professional (CBCP) with over 20 years experience in the business continuity/disaster recovery field and a Masters in IT Project Management.

Prior to joining the LSBDC he was Executive Consultant for Category 5 Services where he personally assisted companies in implementing several from the ground up business continuity programs. One of the companies went from non-recoverable to a 2 hour recovery time objective in less than 6 months.

Before that Glen was SVP or Director of Business Continuity for several Fortune 100 companies including Bank of Oklahoma, International Paper, Capital One, BellSouth.net and NationsBank where he was responsible for the design, creation and implementation of company wide business continuity programs.

He is a member of the Disaster Recovery Institute, a two term member of the Disaster Recovery Journal Editorial Advisory Board and President Emeritus of the Mid-South ACP chapter in Memphis.

Glen also holds a Masters in Banking from the Stonier School of Banking, a Bachelor of Science degree in Management from LSU and is a certified project management professional.

Purpose of session

Purpose of this session is to present an overview of the business continuity field and to share concepts, terminology and an approach to business continuity planning that you can use to improve the odds that your company will not fail due to a disaster. He will also demonstrate how asking Business Continuity and Disaster questions before a project can improve project success.
